Situated on the south side of Ibiza, is a whitewashed Art-Deco inspired hotel of 53 rooms. One of the few remaining listed buildings on the island and the ‘funkiest hotel in Ibiza’, is an art-deco vision of a hotel set between the iconic Ibiza Town and Playa D’en Bossa. Having undergone a £2.5 million makeover, is now the epitome of island luxury while retaining old-school charm. Legendary amongst its clients of fashion folk, designers and club lands high fliers for its level of service, style and pool parties.

The exterior façade of the hotel is permeated with Ibizan turquoise and white, blending into the blue seas while the interior exudes a completely different world – subtle greys and soft furnishings transport the guest to a luxury apartment, a sanctuary from the bustling Ibizan nightlife. The Sky Bar offers panoramic views of Mediterranean seas below for guests as a relaxing space to enjoy drinks throughout day and night, acting as a hub for the socialites and creative folk of the island.

Sean Cochrane the designer was keen to allude to his penchant for balancing contemporary details with classic style and luxury. The restaurant and bar have been revamped to their former art-deco glory, drawing on the refinement and glamour of the 1920's. On first entering the restaurant, the striking symmetry created by the mirrors and uniform seating areas draws you toward the monolithic pearlized bar and the bespoke floor of art-deco patterned Ibiza Bianca marble inlaid with veined black marble acting as a catwalk for its glamorous clients.

Every element of design within the hotel was executed by Cochrane Design to inspire the feeling of 1920's elegance, including the bespoke studded leather chairs, polished chrome feet, back plates and marble table tops as well as the covered ceiling with stepped detail corning.
